19. Three Little Pigs

about the book

When Dozy, Pokey, and Hardy went out into the world, Papa and Mama warned them to build strong houses because of the big bad wolf.

Dozey and Pokey ignored their parents' advice and built flimsy houses. But Hardy listened to his parents by working hard and building a strong house. After the big, bad wolf blew down the houses of Dozey and Pokey, they narrowly escaped to Hardy's house, and learned a valuable lesson about doing their best.

In rewriting this classic tale, Carl Sommer teaches the importance of diligence, respect for labor, and self-discipline.

Diligent to Desire Wisdom

Long, long ago in a forest far away there lived a happy family of pigs. There was Papa Pig, Mama Pig, and the three little pigs, Dozey, Pokey, and Hardy.

Both Papa and Mama had taught them many things. But Dozey would rather do anything than listen to Papa and Mama teach.

Dozey did not want to learn. Wise individuals are diligent to gain wisdom.

Perseverance

Whenever Papa or Mama gave Pokey work to do, he would obey. But after a short while he would grumble. “This is hard work! I’m quitting!”

Successful people know the importance of persevering in spite of difficulties. They are diligent, and they do not let difficulties stop them. They believe in the motto: When the going gets tough, the tough get going.

Respect for Labor and Self-Discipline Brings Success

Whenever Papa or Mama gave Hardy work to do, he always listened and obeyed. And even when things got hard, Hardy kept working and working.

Hardy was a disciplined and diligent worker. Respect for labor and self-discipline brings success.

Obeying Parents

Dozey said to Hardy, “Why don’t you be smart and build a house like mine?”

“Oh no!” said Hardy. “I’m building a strong house. Remember, Papa and Mama warned us about the big bad wolf.”

As Hardy began mixing cement to lay the bricks, he got another visitor—Pokey.

“You’re working much too hard,” warned Pokey. “You need to learn to relax and play. Build a house like mine. You can always build a strong house later when it’s not so hot. Why don’t you come and play with us?”

“Oh no!” said Hardy. “I’m building a strong house. Remember, Papa and Mama warned us about the big bad wolf.”

Hardy was determined to obey his parents. Wise children do the same.

Being Harassed for Doing Right

Dozey and Pokey came to watch Hardy work. “Ha! Ha! Ha!” they teased. “We’ve already finished building our houses, and we’re having lots of fun. Ha! Ha! Ha!”

“You can laugh at me,” said Hardy, “but I’m listening to Papa and Mama.”

Dozey and Pokey walked away laughing as they hurried off to play. Sometimes people will laugh and make fun of you when you want to do what’s right. Those who are wise will never listen to such individuals.

Seeking Knowledge

At the library, Hardy was looking for books about wolves. He wanted to find a way to get rid of the big bad wolf once and for all.

Hardy was seeking knowledge by going to the library to find out how to build a strong house and how to get rid of the big bad wolf once and for all. Be a seeker of knowledge—you'll never regret it. Going to the library and reading books is an excellent way to learn. Be wise; seek after knowledge.

The Law of Sowing and Reaping

Dozey shook all over as he watched the big bad wolf, with just one little puff, blow his house down. "Ohhhhhh!" cried Dozey. "How foolish of me to build such a flimsy house."

Dozey was lazy by building a straw house, now he reaps what he sowed.

Listening to Advice

Pokey and Dozey went to build new, strong houses, just like Hardy's. They had learned their lessons—listen and work hard.

Pokey and Dozey had finally learned to listen to the counsel of their father and mother. And that is why they lived happily ever after.
